William R. Martel

Senior Project Manager

William R. Martel, Jr. (Bill) has over 25 years of experience in the construction field.

He started his career at Concrete Protection & Restoration (CP&R) in 1998 as Project Manager, being responsible, on an ongoing basis, for the management and success of approximately 6-8 projects on average, typically representing $5-8 million in revenue for the company.

William is also accountable for personnel management, which includes Site Supervisor management and the oversight of roughly 50 laborers, at any given time while also being responsible for payment billing, scheduling, material orders, change orders and the overall quality of work production for each project. He also communicates daily with Property Managers, Building Owners and Engineers to ensure projects meet various expectations and deadlines.

Furthermore, he provides estimations and cost proposals for new business development, administers and oversees contract agreements with sub-contractor relationships, and trains Project Engineers and Project Assistants. William oversees a range of work items such as structural concrete repairs, waterproofing, post-tension cable repairs, coatings, cathodic protective installations and expansion joint replacement having received a series of professional certifications to oversee these types of structural repairs. William is also a member of the International Concrete Repair Institute (ICRI).
